DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

---

Harrisburg, Pa., July 1, 1902.

The following Bulletin No. 95, giving a list of the fair associations in Pennsylvania with the dates of their fall exhibitions and list of membership, amount offered in premiums, etc., has been prepared by the Deputy Secretary for the information of the public who are interested in this feature of agricultural work in Pennsylvania.

The report shows that the condition of these associations is about the same as that reported for the year 1900, and it is not likely that a great stimulus will be given to these organizations until our State Fair Association escapes from its financial difficulties, and turns its attention to the development of these local institutions.

The Department of Agriculture offered some suggestions last year which seemed to be in the interest of the greater usefulness of these county societies—the improvement of the country schools, the improvement of the country roads, and the encouraging of better home surroundings in our farming communities. These are all subjects of the highest importance and are worthy of the serious attention and effort of the members of these organizations. Work in these directions would not interfere with the usual practice of the county societies; premiums can be offered as heretofore and inducements presented the same as in previous years. The lines of work herein indicated would be supplemental to those heretofore practiced by these organizations and would give occupation of a most beneficial character to the boards of directors and members of the societies during the entire year. It is to be hoped that the several boards will take up these suggestions and consider whether they are not in position to undertake the carrying out of at least one or two of them during the coming year.

JOHN HAMILTON,
Secretary of Agriculture.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL.

---

Harrisburg, Pa., July 1, 1902.

Hon. John Hamilton. Secretary of Agriculture.

Dear Sir: I have the honor to present herewith. list of agricultural fairs and exhibitions to be held during the fall of 1902.

This bulletin embraces full number of fairs for which reports have been received from their secretaries. up to July 1. 1902, and shows a marked advancement and improvement in the management of county fairs in Pennsylvania; especially is this evident in the character of exhibits of live stock, cereals, fruits and vegetables. The enhanced prices for their products has stimulated the farmers to secure greater degree of excellence in the different classes of exhibits.

We also note the employment of expert judges to pass upon the merits of competitive exhibits. which is becoming almost the universal practice. In order to further improve this method, we recommend that fair associations not only procure expert judges but that these judges be required to give a public address setting forth their reasons for awarding premiums. By so doing, competitors will be enabled to realize more fully the justice of the decision, as well as to understand what are the demands for a more perfect product in the various lines. Such information, if published and circulated, would be of great public interest, and assist in raising the standard of product in every line of exhibit.

This bulletin further shows the attendance at last year's fairs to have been 1,024,250; number of one-half mile race tracks, 50; one-third mile, 9; president and secretary of the societies, with their addresses; membership, 9,023; membership fees, $2,297.10; amount paid in premiums last year $113,347.93; amount offered this year, $132,682.00; also dates, places, etc.

Very truly yours,

A. L. MARTIN,
Deputy Secretary of Agriculture.
